We can handle most cases over the phone or we can fly to your location, worldwide. Let many of our former JAG's help you in your legal time of need. Positive Urinalysis

When a member of the military tests positive on a urinalysis test for illegal drugs, he/she will face adverse action which will likely lead to the termination of his/her military career, as well as a possible federal conviction and confinement. There are several types of urinalysis, random, 100% unit test, command directed which must be based on probable cause, and consent tests. Greg Rinckey has experience both defending and prosecuting urinalysis cases and will provide aggressive representation in a court-martial or Administrative Separation action for a positive drug screen. If you are facing a potential separation or conviction and are seeking legal counsel, contact Tully Rinckey PLLC 24 hours a day, 7 days a week at 703-525-4700. Shaken Baby Syndrome

As one of the more serious crimes aggressively prosecuted in the military, Greg Rinckey has litigated previous cases involving shaken baby syndrome and understands the complexities of this type of case. Our attorneys will explore every legal avenue, and will vigorously represent clients facing this charge. When your future is on the line, trust an attorney that has experience in this field. has represented numerous service members on charges of rape and sexual assault and understands the harsh consequences if found guilty of the alleged charges. The military attorneys at Tully Rinckey PLLC have experience with sex crimes in the military and are prepared to stand up for your rights. Call Tully Rinckey PLLC today at 703-525-4700. Adultery in the Military

Adultery is still a crime under the UCMJ and is defined as having sexual relations with someone other than your spouse, even if you are "legally separated." Adultery is also committed if you are not married and have sex with a person who is married or even separated from their spouse. Aggravating circumstance also occur if the spouse of the person you have relations with is deployed or in your unit. Usually adultery is not prosecuted under the UCMJ as a stand alone charge, it is usually added to other sex charges such as rape or sexual assault. However, the military may give you administrative punishment, like a letter of reprimand, which has the potential to end your military career. If you have been accused of adultery and are seeking experienced and aggressive defense lawyers, call Tully Rinckey to set up a consult to learn about your rights. Our former JAG's have experience handling these matters and can provide you with honest advice. Computer Crimes

Although the internet has made great changes in our lives, it has also brought into play a new area of criminal offenses that did not exist several years ago - internet crimes. Many people seem to believe that what they do on the internet, in the privacy of their homes, is no one else's business; however, that is not the case. Military CID agencies are expending a tremendous amount of time investigating the use of the internet for offenses related to children. Greg Rinckey has extensive experience in defending clients that have been apprehended after viewing and/or distributing child pornography in the secrecy of their homes. A conviction for these offenses may not only lead to the loss of a military career and significant confinement, but may also require the person to be registered as a sex offender under federal and state sex offender registration laws. Thus you may have to register with you state of home record when you return home. We are well prepared to provide an aggressive defense to criminal charges related to the internet.
