

Government Contractors

The security clearance process for government contract personnel is uniquely different than that of federal personnel. Most notably, contractors are subject to adjudication by the Defense Industrial Security Clearance Office (DISCO). Contractors who either unconsciously or consciously falsify/omit personal information in their security clearance package face denial and the loss of their job. It is important to complete the clearance package accurately and honestly initially, to ensure one is granted an interim clearance and final clearance. The National Security Law practice group at Tully Rinckey PLLC is able to assist any and all contract personnel in their industrial security clearance package concerns. Our lawyers are able to identify potential mitigating factors to help you avoid disqualification. Further, we can help you accurately complete all forms since you may never have a second chance to explain your answers. Working with Tully Rinckey PLLC's National Security Law practice group before submitting your SF-86 is one of the easiest ways to help ensure your application is complete and reduce future issues or denials. We are available for counsel across the country and collaborate with you to achieve results. Our core competencies include: Preparation of SF-86 & Security Clearance Packages, Identifying Disqualifying Issues & Mitigating Factors, Written Appeal Preparation.

Preparation for interrogatories and investigative interviews

Preparation and Representation throughout the Appeals Process

If you are a federal contractor applying for a security clearance or are experiencing security clearance issues, download Tully Rinckey's free "Guide to Security Clearances & Facility Clearances

" to learn more about the clearance process and your appeal rights. Call the National Security Law practice group at Tully Rinckey PLLC today. Attorneys are available around the clock for consultations and assistance at 703-525-4700.