

Bankruptcy Litigation

The U.S. Bankruptcy Code is extremely complex, and it does not take much for a debtor to stray from its requirements and become prone to bankruptcy litigation. Wanting to protect their perceived interests, creditors may sue debtors whom they believe have made preferential payments or transfers or fraudulent conveyances. Creditors could also open themselves up to litigation if they disregard the automatic stay triggered by a bankruptcy filing and continue collection efforts against the debtor. What We Can Do for You
