

Correction of Military Records

Errors and injustices in your military record can have broad, adverse impacts on your life. They could, for example, prevent you from re-enlisting or obtaining health care, retirement, or education benefits. Each branch of the armed forces has a Board for Correction of Military Records that can correct errors and eliminate injustices in your military records. How We Can Help

Tully Rinckey PLLC's military law attorneys have successfully represented current and former service members before all of the branches' Boards for Correction for Military Records. We can help you obtain a discharge upgrade or re-enlistment code change, have a letter of reprimand removed, or amend the narrative reason for a discharge. Through our successful representation, service members have also had the Board for Correction of Military Records change their DD Form 214 ("Certificate of Release or Discharge from Active Duty") and their FITREP. Active duty and former service members, along with members of the Reserves or National Guard, can petition to their branch's Board for Correction of Military Records. Generally, service members have three years after an error or injustice is discovered or reasonably should have been discovered to file an application with the Board. However, the Board can extend this deadline. Call Tully Rinckey PLLC in Rochester, N.Y., if you want relief from the stigma of an error or injustice in your military records.
