

Breach of Contract

A breach of contract occurs when at least one party lacks a valid legal reason for deviating from the terms of an agreement. Whether the breaching party failed to perform or pay as agreed upon, the non-breaching party must act quickly to minimize the impacts of the breach.

How We Can Help

Whether you are concerned that another party will breach a contract, as in the case of anticipatory breach of contract, or have been adversely affected by a breach, Tully Rinckey PLLC lawyers in Syracuse, N.Y. can help. We've represented a broad range of businesses in contract disputes, including heavy equipment manufacturers, mortgage companies, wholesale floorplan financing companies and a variety of small businesses. Depending on the circumstances, we can help parties seek or dispute claims for contract enforcement, injunction relief, and financial compensation or punitive damages. We may also help parties seek or dispute requests for rescission, where a court orders the establishment of pre-contract conditions. Call Tully Rinckey PLLC today if your contract dispute involves the following:

employment contracts confidentiality agreements non-compete agreements non-solicitation agreements failure to pay for goods provided
