

Land Use Disputes

For many Central New Yorkers, their real property is their most valuable asset. To preserve the value and propriety of their property, they must assert their rights and guard against wrongful encroachments. At Tully Rinckey PLLC in Syracuse, our attorneys can represent a variety of parties in land use and property disputes, including adjacent and land-locked property owners, neighbors, landowners, squatters, municipalities, and government agencies.

How We Can Help

We know real estate law. We know how to protect your property. Call a Tully Rinckey PLLC attorney in Syracuse, N.Y. if your land use or property dispute involves any of the following matters:

access concerns

adverse possession

blocked waterway

boundary disputes

condemnation

easements

evictions

fence disputes

licenses

ordinance violations

pollution

property damage

rights of way

runoff

squatters

theft of property

tree trimming (branch and root)

wetlands

wrongful timber cutting/removal

zoning

Don't delay in calling us today. If you wait too long or grant another party permission to use your property without first consulting a lawyer, you could end up inadvertently ceding right to the property through a process called "adverse possession." We will fight relentlessly for you and your property. Tully Rinckey PLLC's land use lawyers can represent individuals and businesses throughout Central New York, including Syracuse, Cicero, North Syracuse, Manlius, Liverpool, East Syracuse, Cazenovia, Baldwinsville, and DeWitt. Call today to schedule a meeting with one of our property dispute attorneys at 1-888-LAW-4-LIFE or e-mail info@1888law4life.com
